Work with Department of Education faculty in three program areas:

- Culture, Language and Human Development
- Learning, Teaching, and Teacher Education
- Policy, Program Evaluation, and Research Methods

The Department of Education investigates issues that shape learning environments, the needs of diverse learners, the development of disciplinary knowledge, educational policies, and research methods. In our doctoral program, we mentor graduate students through small seminars and research groups toward future careers as professors, researchers, teacher educators, and educational administrators. Our master's program (which includes both professional and research strands) offers opportunities to learn the basics of doing and applying research in settings ranging from K-12 schools, to the university, to community organizations.
