October 17 — October 31

Gaye Therese-Johnson & Alex Lubin
The Future of Black Radicalism
Tuesday, October 17
6 pm - 7:30 pm, MCC Theater
“Cedric Robinson was a towering intellectual and courageous activist in the grand tradition of W.E.B Du Bois. In these bleak times, it is imperative to keep his legacy alive and build on his work and witness. [Futures of Black Radicalism] meets this imperative in a powerful way!” – Cornel West. With racial justice struggles on the rise, the editors of Futures of Black Radicalism—Professor of African-American Studies and Chicano/a Studies at UCLA, Gaye Therese-Johnson, and Professor and Chair of American Studies at the University of New Mexico, Alex Lubin—will consider the past and future of black radicalism, keeping in mind that Black radical politics are thoroughly internationalist and intentionally redrawing the links between Black resistance and anti-capitalism.

Douglas H. Daniels
Berkeley’s Freedom Struggle in the 1950s
Thursday, October 26
4 pm - 5 pm, 4603 South Hall
Free lecture by Douglas Daniels, professor emeritus, Black Studies and History. Berkeley’s reputation as a liberal city is often overstated: like much of the state, it was a Republican stronghold for the first half of the past century. After WWII, however, a new political tradition emerged. Black activists registered voters, formed alliances with white progressives, prompted surveys of school segregation and housing discrimination, and elected Black city officials; students, progressives, and other citizens protested job discrimination and the House Un-American Activities Committee. The protests of the 1960s cannot be understood without considering this earlier freedom struggle that involved civil liberties as well as civil rights.
