GGSE Thanksgiving Dinner
Wednesday, November 14
3:30 pm - 6 pm, ED 4205

Due to the political gridlock in the U.S. Congress, the fate of more than two million young immigrants remains uncertain. In 2012, President Obama introduced the Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA) program, and at the five year mark, more than 800,000 young people had benefited from the legislation. Things quickly changed under the Trump administration when U.S. Attorney General Jeff Sessions announced an end to this policy. What does this termination mean for these young people and their families’ futures? And what is the role of communities in this new policy’s wake? Based on a six year study, involving interviews with 481 young people in six states, Professor Gonzales provides some interesting answers to these vexing questions.
